

What is a Forklift Attachment?

A lift truck attachment is a device that can be attached to a conventional lift truck. While the lift truck performs the task of transportation, the attachment performs the task of actual lifting, handling and maneuvering of load. Because applications of load handling and management can be diverse, companies find it especially economical to buy a conventional lift truck and then attach / detach these specialized devices as per the need. This makes the investment more viable and also allows the company to handle diverse types of items, such as those that come into warehouses, get downloaded from and uploaded onto ships, trains and aircraft, etc.
